Project numbers: 0028-96A-582Up: 116298 Page Last modified: 28 March 2022 Anyone who driving in northern Virginia in the last four months has noted less cars on the road because of Coronavirus pandemic. Before the pandemic, it was impossible to imagine the trip to Tysons Angle to the end of the Dulles Road that takes less than 15 minutes, but that travel time has become routine in March, April, May and June. The length of the road is just more than 13 miles. In June alone, there were about 50% less transactions, and this is also considerably car on the June road compared to April and May. Virginia residents are protesting an increase in the set rate to take effect in January on the Dulles toll road. Repairs will close a lane on the Dulles Toll Road this weekend, leaving drivers with only one possibility to pay. The toll rates increased in 2019, which compensate for a slight reduction of road use. A graph showing the decline of Toll Road transactions of Dulles from the virus epidemic in March.
